

David Bloomfield

Started working for the Labor Commission as a Utah OSHA Safety Officer in 1979. During that time I conducted OSHA inspections which included complaint inspections. I also conducted accident investigations. In 1990 I became a Safety and Health Consultant with Utah OSHA Consultation Services. Both Divisions of Utah OSHA are to assist employers to comply with the OSHA regulations. The only way that Utah OSHA can assist employers is after the employer has requested our services which are free to the employer. All of our findings are confidential from compliance.

Before I worked for the Labor Commission I worked at various companies in the general industry sector. This work included working in a warehouse as a forklift operator, on an assembly line making dish washers, and doing janitorial work.

I scheduled to cover the Local Emphasis Program for Construction Industry. A copy of this emphasis program can be found on the Labor Commission webpage at <http://laborcommission.utah.gov/index.html>